

What's Your Reason?

They're Too Expensive!

Not taking your prescription medication as directed can cost even more if your condition gets worse and you need additional treatment or hospitalization.

You may have good reasons for not always taking your medication. There are better reasons why you should.

If you are having trouble affording your medication, there may be help:

- Talk to your doctor about less expensive options.
- Review your prescription drug coverage. It may pay more towards a similar medicine to the one you are taking.
- Look into prescription assistance programs. More information is available at the Partnership for Prescription Assistance Web site — www.pparx.org.
- Don't stop taking your medicine without talking to your doctor first.
